

CONVICTION IS DEMANDED FOR 11 MEN, SPY TRIAL

Prosecutor Asks Such for Five Britons and Six Russians

THE VICKERS CASE Leniency Recommended For Five Other Russian Prisoners

MOSCOW, Apr. 17.—Conviction of five British and six Russians in the Metropolitan Vickers spy trial was demanded by Prosecutor Andre Vysh-insky.

The prosecutor exonerated A. W.
Gregory, one of the original six British defendants and asked his acquittal.
He recommended leniency for the other five Russian prisoners. Vyshinsky said he would let the Court decide whether death sentences should be imposed if the men are convicted.

"We do not insist upon it, although they well deserve it," he said.

After dealing with V. L. MacDonald and W. H. Thornton, Vyshinsky leveled his gun of criticism at Charles Nordwall, another of the British defendants.

"It has been definitely proved he was a member of the British Secret Service," Vyshinsky said. Quoting the prisoner's own deposition, the prosecutor attempted to show much of the evidence against Nordwall was based upon testimony by A. Lobanov, one of the Russian defendants.

"He was not a very reliable witness," Vyshinsky said, "but he is as reliable as the man whom he accuses."
The fact that Lobanov is the son of a former factory owner and thereby falls into the hated Bourgeois class, militates against him, Vyshinsky said.
Lobanov confessed receiving five thousand rubles and a fur coat from Nordwall in exchange for sabotage.
Nordwall insists the money was loaned and the coat was given in appreciation of Lobanov's hard work for the Metropolitan Vickers.

Tokyo, Apr. 17.—The Japanese foreign office today scoffed at rumors that Japan would be opposed to recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States. A spokesman declared:
"It is unthinkable that Japan would look with disfavor if Washington extends recognition to Russia."

Fire Damages Buildings At Woodlawn Park, Trenton

TRENTON, N. J., Apr. 17.—Four buildings, including a large dance hall, were destroyed and two other structures were damaged early yesterday when flames swept the east section of Woodlawn Park, situated on Greenwood avenue, just over the city line. Park officials estimate the loss at $40,000 and say no insurance was carried.

The eight remaining contestants in the Walkathon, started at the park several weeks ago, and an audience of more than 100 men and women marched quietly from the dance hall as the blaze started.

Besides the large dance hall, the buildings destroyed were a two-story structure containing the park offices and the apartment of George D. Bishop, an official of the Woodlawn Park Association, a refreshment stand and a concession booth. Two other booths were damaged by the flames.

An auditorium orthophonic reproducer, valued at $6,000, which was installed in the dance building a few years ago, was destroyed as the flames reached the hall.

Mr. Bishop said last night that the burned structures would not be rebuilt. He stated that the carousel would be converted into a dance pavillion and that portable concession buildings would be erected on the grounds for the opening in the early summer.

Joan Blondell Featured As Leader of Band of Crooks

An ever fascinating and refreshing Joan Blondell will make her bow in a new role on the screen of the Grand Theatre today in the first National picture, "Blondie Johnson," in which she is co-featured with Chester Morris.

Joan has the role of a beautiful, but cold, hard and ruthless leader of a band of crooks whom she rules with an iron hand. In this picture she dominates the male of the species even as the male has dominated her in recent productions.

An innocent girl hardened by the death of her mother through poverty and neglect, she sets out deliberately to get rich by hook or crook. She has a grudge against men, and being brilliant and dominating, she bends them to her will.

"Blondie Johnson" is a new type of picture character, a type which actually exists but has not heretofore been shown to screen fans.

Smart dialogue and many humorous situations add to the entertainment value of the picture, which on the whole is said to be a highly dramatic thriller.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE; IMPROVES

Quakertown, Apr. 17.—Norman Hessler, 24, of Sellersville R. D. 2, who attempted suicide by shooting himself at his home late Saturday, was reported in an improved condition today by physicians at the Community Hospital here.

Inability to find employment with which to support his family, prompted his act, police said.

A shotgun charge tore away part of Hessler's shoulder.

VASKO FAMILY LOCATED

Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y., Apr. 17.—The pinch of poverty and a belated conviction that, after all, the doctors may be right, promised to win the "eye for a life" battle for baby Helen Vasko today.

Close friends of the Vasko family, missing from their humble home since Saturday, said the father, John Vasko, was ready to take the infant to the Grassland's Hospital at Yonkers immediately if the Appellate Court should order an operation on little Helen's eye. She is suffering from a malignant tumor on the left eye which surgeons say will cause her death unless the eye is removed very soon.

These friends revealed that the Vasko family had not gone to visit relatives at a small mining town near Pottsville, Pa., as they had intended on Saturday. They did not have the funds to get there. Instead, the Vasko's spent the week-end with friends in North Yonkers, it was said, and are now planning to return to their home.

Although the mother, Mrs. Anna Vasko, remains bitterly opposed to the proposed operation, friends said the father had become convinced the physicians urging the operation may be right after all. The mother clings to her "better death than blindness" doctrine, but the father was represented as being ready to turn the child over to the hospital immediately if a court decision so ordering is delivered.

MOTHER AND SON FOUND DEAD

Philadelphia, Apr. 17.—A mother and son were found dead today, victims of inhaling illuminating gas in the kitchen of the home of State Senator G. Woodward in Germantown. The victims were: Mrs. Edward J. Green and her son, Percy, 32. They were found by the elder Green, employed on the estate. Green said all gas jets on the kitchen stove were open and the windows were stuffed with papers. He said his son had been estranged from his wife recently, but could give no reason for his wife's act in joining what apparently was a suicide pact.

SERVICE HONORS MEMORY OF LATE P. H. LONGHURST

Sacred Musical Numbers Given at Grace Church,
Hulmeville

LIFE HISTORY GIVEN

HULMEVILLE, Apr. 17.—The service of sacred music in memory of the late Philip H. Longhurst, which was held at Grace P. E. Church, here, last evening, was largely attended.

The service in memory of the late Mr. Longhurst, a communicant, vestryman and lay-readers at Grace Church from 1913 to 1924, brought more clearly to the minds of the worshippers the fact that the deeds of those who have passed on still live. The program: Processional hymn; opening sentences; trumpet solo, Warren Ireland; vocal solo, H. Douglass LeCompte; evening prayer; lesson, creed, prayer; vocal duet, Mrs. Jennie Halk and Mr. LeCompte; address, William A. Thomas, lay-reader; duet, Mrs. Halk and Mrs. Ludwig; offertory, anthem "Christ the Lord is Risen Today"; closing prayers; vocal solo, Mrs. Halk; benediction; trumpet solo, Mr. Ireland; recessional.

In his address Mr. Thomas gave a brief account of the life of the one whose memory was honored, and told of his accomplishments and active interest in the church.

DANCE TONIGHT

Everything is in readiness for the dance this evening in Mutual Aid Hall, sponsored by the Daughters of Italy. Dancing will start at eight o'clock and music will be furnished by Tosti's Harmony Kings.

ESSAY, "HOW MY HOME ECONOMICS EDUCATION HELPS AT HOME," WINS FIRST HONORS FOR MISS WINIFRED STAUFFER IN BRISTOL HIGH CONTEST

Delegate From Japan

Viscount Kikujiro Ishii, veteran Japanese statesman, who has been selected to represent his country at the forthcoming series of parleys at Washington, D. C., suggested by President Roosevelt as a prelude to the world economic conference. He will sail for the U. S. on May 4. It is thought that the Ishii-Lansing agreement of 1917, whereby the United States recognizes that "Japan has special interests in China," will be revived.

INVOKES NEW POLICY OF STATE GOVERNMENT

Pinchot Signs Six Scott Bills
Permitting Money
Transfer

FOR THOSE RETIRING

HARRISBURG, Apr. 17.—(INS)—By signing six Scott bills permitting transfer of moneys from special funds to the State Employees' Retirement System, Gov. Gifford Pinchot invoked a new policy of State government.

It marked the first time in the history of the Commonwealth that such a transfer has been authorized. The policy, upheld by some and denounced by others, is in effect nothing more than an economy measure.

Heretofore, finances for supporting the retirement system were obtained from the general fund and contributions of state employees. Economic conditions resulted in a drastic cut in state revenues which made substantial cuts in the general appropriation bill absolutely necessary.

Consequently the policy of "tapping" the special funds was invoked and it is likely to continue.

The Scott bills brought $536,520 from special funds into the coffers of the retirement system for the 1933-35 biennium. The manufacturing fund donated $8,840; state workmen's insurance fund, $13,090; motor license, $433,500; banking department, $45,050; fish, $11,220; and game, $24,820.

The fairness of the transfers lies in the fact that each sum is earmarked for a specific purpose. Money taken out of the motor license fund will be paid to meet the retirement salaries of only those who were retired while drawing their pay from that fund. Similar conditions govern the other departments.

The policy in reality, provides that each fund will finance the retirement allotments of employees of its department. This change will eliminate a heavy drain on the resources of the general fund that pays general governmental expenses.

While the Governor approved the Scott bills, he still insists that special funds should not be expected to keep the budget balanced. In this respect, he guards with extreme care the motor license fund, the financial resources of which are acquired directly from the motorist through gasoline taxes and license fees. His stand is that motorists pay this money and that only they should benefit from it by improved highways.

A similar stand is taken regarding the fish and game funds.

C. Taylor Knight Will Be Buried Wednesday Afternoon

'On Wednesday, the date on which he would have observed his 91st birthday, C. Taylor Knight will be buried from his Bristol Township home.

Death occurred for the nonagenarian Saturday afternoon after an illness of several months' duration.

The deceased was born in Langhorne, and had followed the farming profession. He retired several years ago. The late Mr. Knight is survived by his wife, Anna B. Knight. He was the son of the late Absalom and Elizabeth Harding Knight.

The funeral on Wednesday to which relatives and friends are invited, will occur from the late home of the deceased, Emilie Road, at two p. m. The Rev. T. William Smith, pastor of Ne-shaminy M. E. Church, Hulmeville, will officiate. Burial is to be made in Friends' Burying Ground, Langhorne.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Olson, Croydon, are parents of a daughter born at Harriman Hospital, last evening.

Second Prize to Louise Des-camps; Third to Rose Catalanotti

Miss Winifred Stauffer, a student at Bristol high school, has been presented with a blue ribbon, first prize in the home economics essay contest staged at the high school, and in which several students participated.

The writer of the essay will compete with other school winners in a national cash award contest, her essay to be sent to the Home Makers Educational Service at Freeport, N. Y. Second prize, a red ribbon, was accorded Miss Louise Descamps; and third, a yellow ribbon, was presented to Miss Rose Catalanotti.

Miss Stauffer's essay, "How my home economics education helps at home," follows:

In the high school of today where many and varied subjects are offered, the students have the opportunity of obtaining an education which has both practical and cultured advantages. In these strenuous times the ratings on subjects have become more severe, as it is necessary for the high school to offer mainly only those subjects which will fit the student for her life work, and best enable her to become an asset to her community. Generally speaking the girl's part is home-making. Every girl should learn to be a capable house-keeper, even though she may never be compelled to use that knowledge. Through the Home Economics Course, as taught in the high school, the girl student is prepared, by consistent training, for the vocation of home-making as practiced in present-day life.

The student of home economics learns how she can select the least expensive and yet nutritious foods—a fact which is always wise, yet more necessary during this economic period of depression. With equal importance she is taught how to prepare and serve these foods. Cooking teaches two very essential principles which should be applied to other duties as well. These two principles are cleanliness and exactness. A good cook must consider both of these principles and the student readily learns that the observance of such brings success in cooking. From her study of food-values she wisely prepares the food in such a way as to retain nourishment. Remembering her many lessons and experience in serving, she aptly serves her meals in the most appetizing and appealing style.

All of this knowledge which the student obtains while in high school is not likely to be stored away, and not made use of, for the student is naturally going to carry it into her home.

Many a young bride begins her married life in total ignorance as to the management of a home. The divorce is oft-times the outcome of this sad

QUAKERTOWN MAY SUE FOR FAULTY SEWER JOB

Repairs to System Will Cost Nearly $42,000, It Is Said

WAS UNSATISFACTORY

QUAKERTOWN, Apr. 17.—Borough Council, in special session took action which may result in a suit for damages against the firm which superintends the construction of the sewer system here. In addition to this, Council found that it had a weighty problem on its hands, that of raising the sum of at least $42,000 for the repairs to the sewer system which had been very unsatisfactory since its construction several years ago.

The special meeting was held for the purpose of hearing a report of a representative of a well known engineering firm regarding the condition of the system.

Members of the sewer investigating committee have been studying the conditions for some time and the committee finally turned its findings over to the representative of the engineering firm who made a number of recommendations at the special meeting. Should Council follow the recommendations made by the representative of the engineering firm, it will mean an expenditure of at least $42,000.

It was indicated in the report submitted to Council that the sewers overflow, that the sewage does not have the proper flow, that solids remain in the lines, decomposition sets in and odor results.

It was alleged that the system is full of leaks, that there are open joints and broken pipes, that the line has a poor foundation, that pipes are not properly supported, that house connections are broken, manholes defective and that pipes leading from the pumping station to the sewer plant are too small.

This Takes the Brass Ring

Mu Kaun and Mu Prao, members of the strange, giraffe-necked tribe of Upper Burma, are pictured in their first American bed after their arrival at New York from their native land to be exhibited in the current circus. In infancy these women encircle their necks with several brass bands, and each year another ring is added, each larger than the preceding. An adult woman wears about 25 rings, which stretch their necks to enormous proportions.

BUS FORCED OFF ROAD; EIGHT ARE INJURED

Accident Occurred On Lincoln
Highway at South Langhorne Hill

2 HURT AT EDDINGTON

A Philadelphia-bound bus was forced off the road in a blinding rainstorm last night on the Lincoln Highway at the foot of the South Langhorne hill. The bus crashed into a dozen fence posts, sidwiped a concrete culvert, dropped over a 10-foot embankment and came to a halt against a large tree.

Two of the passengers, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Fine, of 3850 North Percy street, Philadelphia, were rushed to Frankford Hospital, where the former was found to be suffering from severe contusions of the neck and shock and his wife from a possible fractured jaw and shock.

John M. Aspen, 30, of 953 Pratt street, Philadelphia, driver of the bus, received a fractured left arm, possible internal injuries and a severe shaking up and bruises. He refused treatment until all the passengers had been cared for and awaited an emergency bus from Philadelphia before he would go to a hospital.

Corporal R. D. Evans and Patrolmen Diem and Hoeftfelder, of the Langhorne barracks of the Pennsylvania Highway Patrol, treated five other passengers for minor cuts and shock.

Aspen told the police that a car coming the other way forced him on to the shoulder of the road, which was weakened by the recent rains, and that it gave under the wheels of the heavy vehicle.

Police stated that if the tree had not been there, the bus would undoubtedly have turned over, seriously injuring many of its occupants.

The driver stated that he had not had an accident for the past five years and that this was the first one he has had since driving motor buses.

A woman and a small girl were seriously injured on the Bristol Pike, at Eddington, Saturday midnight, when they are alleged to have stepped in front of the car of Richard J. Sawyer, of the Torresdale Golf Grounds, Grant and Frankford avenues, Eddington.

The injured, Mrs. Mary Linton, 43, and Ethel White, 8, both of Eddington, were rushed to Frankford Hospital, where it was announced that Mrs. Linton is suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and lacerations. The girl received a fracture of the left leg and abrasions. Highway Patrolman Vincent J. Coughlin investigated and said no arrests would be made.

The victims had alighted from a train at the Eddington Station shortly before the accident.

Miss Marie M. Britton, of 23 South 61st Street, Philadelphia, had a narrow escape from death shortly before midnight Saturday and plunged the section of Bucks County about Trevoise in darkness, when her car went out of control on the Lincoln Highway near Street Road, struck a pole and snapped it in half.

Miss Britton told Patrolman Coughlin that as she was traveling towards Trenton, something went wrong with the steering wheel. Miss Britton escaped injury although her car was wrecked.

Still in Hospital; Has A Fracture of The Jaw

Miss Alice Keating, Radcliffe street, is still in Harriman Hospital, receiving treatment for a fractured jaw, suffered when the automobile in which she was riding Friday evening struck a pole south of the borough.

Miss Keating was a passenger in a coupe driven by James Hill, Radcliffe street. The driver was unhurt. Another passenger, Miss Mildred Macchette, was treated at Harriman Hospital for contusions of the knee and right hand.

MORRISVILLE MAY CLOSE SCHOOLS FOR TERM END OF MAY

All Teachers' Contracts Are Terminated and Cuts
To Be Made

TO REDUCE FACULTY

Art, Music and Health Supervisors To Be Dispersed
With

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 17.—All teachers' contracts are being terminated at the close of the present school year, in order that the board may be in a position to draw up new ones carrying drastic salary reductions for the 1933-34 term.

There has been some discussion about closing the schools at the end of May because of a shortage of funds. If the Board of Education so decides, the graduation exercises will be pushed a month ahead of the usual date in June.

Supervision of art, music and health programs in the grade schools will be discontinued next term. The present supervisors, who are high school teachers, will be given additional subjects to teach there, making possible a reduction of the staff by two members. Two teachers in the grades also may be eliminated in the general curtailment program.

Obstacles exist to the closing of schools at the end of May. Since the teachers' contracts call for ten months of school, any who objected to losing pay for June might be in a position to collect their salary whether they taught school that month or not.

On the other hand, School Board officials point out that if the schools remain open in June, teachers may be asked to wait until next Fall when the first taxes will be available. Some members are not inclined to support the latter plan, pointing out that the system would be starting a new year "in the red," a serious handicap.

A total of $27,000 is still outstanding in school taxes for this year. The State appropriation was cut $11,000 in addition. The monthly payroll for the schools runs between $5,500 and $6,000.

In keeping with the retrenchment policy, the board lopped $100 from the salary of its secretary and treasurer at its last meeting. The secretary, Walter R. Taylor, will now be paid $200 a year and William O'Neill, treasurer, $100. Taylor was re-elected for a term of four years and O'Neill was named treasurer for one year.

The termination of all teachers' contracts is possible under recent State legislation. It was decided upon as a measure of self protection. Any change in teachers' contracts must be preceded 60 days before the close of

Miss Mildred Curry Is Wed To Hans Scheick

CROYDON, Apr. 17.—Miss Mildred Curry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Curry, Pennsylvania avenue, and Hans Scheick, were married by the Rev. Father Thomas Nolan in the rectory of Thomas Aquinas Church, Saturday at two p. m. They were attended by Harry Mossbrook as best man, and Miss Mary Cox, Bristol, bridesmaid.

The bride was attired in a traveling suit, blue coat and hat.

The couple left immediately after the ceremony for Atlantic City. They will make their home with Mrs. Scheick's parents.

At the home of Miss Dorothy Knight, Croydon Bridge Club had the former Miss Curry as guest of honor Thursday evening. A linen shower was given by the members and the honored one was recipient of some beautiful linen.

Blames Egg Nog After He Is Held On Attack Charge

LANGHORNE, Apr. 17.—(INS)—Harmon W. Richardson, 30, of Bath Road, today was held on an assault and battery and malicious mischief charge after he was alleged to have attacked Mrs. Grace Long, 27, of Durham Road, near South Langhorne. "Too much egg nog," was the excuse he gave to police.

Mrs. Long declared Richardson came to see her yesterday, struck her in the face, knocking out two teeth and then broke the windows and windshield in her automobile.

Richardson was arrested on a warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Daniel Krause, of Langhorne.

Police said Mrs. Long had lodged similar charges against Richardson previously, but had never pressed prosecution.

INSPIRATION

Artistic taste and inspiration approach art from opposite sides, but they mingle in the hearts of children, who like to draw objects as soon as they see them. A grown person may contemplate a statue, a handsome animal, a tall building, or a bird in flight, admire and appreciate the beauty to be found in it, without feeling an irresistible desire to record that grace with his own hand.

Most children, restlessly trying everything that gives an outlet to energy, go through a period of drawing or copying the things that take their fancy. What they like may not be subtle or profound, but it is apt to be lively, suggesting motion, speed and spontaneity, and frequently it is humorous.

It has been observed that many children use the comic pages of the Sunday papers as models in their drawing. All the absurd figures quarreling through the "strips," all the fantastic animals with their more than human expressions, appeal to the childish liking for action and fun. But these are not the best models for cultivating artistic taste and a love for beautiful pictures in the mind of the child.

There is a world of harmless amusement for children in the Sunday "funnies" and the "comics" in the daily papers, but not even those who draw them would recommend them as models for youngsters with the common instinct for drawing. Parents, schools and libraries can do the pencil-wielding child a lasting service by guiding it to the works of the great masters.

Neither can one begin too early to direct the child to good books. The proportion of trash in juvenile reading is probably as large as that in adult reading, and the child who begins with the trash often goes through life without knowing what good literature is.

LIFE ITS OWN MEMORIAL

That styles in tombstone inscriptions are subject to change and have changed in certain essential respects during the last half century are facts brought to public attention by a veteran Ohio stonemason who has been carving epitaphs for five decades. The public, however, will not agree with him that the change is for the worse.

The sculptor for the dead laments that sentimental epitaphs are no longer inscribed on headstones. The modern custom of carving only names and dates on tombstones represents to him so much less work per stone.

Perhaps there are still places in the "uncivilized" hinterland where mourning relatives cause to be chiseled upon the monuments of the dead brief testimonials to the character of the deceased, elegiac or scriptural verses, and even notes of warning to the living or an apophysis on the dead. Rural cemeteries furnish many grotesque examples of this custom of not so long ago.

And why should the tombstone furnish more facts about the dead than the name and dates of birth and death? Man's works are preserved elsewhere than on polished slabs of marble and as he lives he writes the record of that life upon a tablet that not even time can wholly efface.

The motor version is that two can tour as cheaply as one.

Echoes of the Past---

By Louise White Watson

Woman

You recall reading of the morning when those in the vicinity of Niagara Falls, long accustomed to the roaring of its waters as they took their mighty plunge, felt a strangeness in the air, unaccountable for some time till some one shouted, "The flow is checked by ice!" Man, at one time, refused to recognize woman in the world of business. Later desks, offices, organizations, hummed with the spindles set in motion by woman's activities. No ice could check the change, it was here to stay. No enumeration of the many lines in which woman centers in the world of business, is necessary. Also that woman is peculiarly endowed with initiative requires but a glance at the pages all along the line to demonstrate beyond a question that her inventive genius has oiled the grooves for progress.

Julia Barnett Rice

Who but a woman, Julia Barnett Rice, would have conceived and carried into forceful effect the abolishing of all needless and ear-penetrating noises within close range of hospitals? Was her success the work of a moment, or were many laborious and discouraging hours necessary to accomplish that which caused man to bow to woman's mandate and pledge obedience? Was it of trifling moment? Let no one gainsay the significance of silencing, in a measure, the shrill hootings, the deafening whistles that intrude into the presence of those bearing pitiful witness of tortured nerves and throbbing brains already tested by pain to the limit of endurance.

Others

Empress Catherine, of Russia, born of German parents, became Russian through and through, realizing that to become the success she meant to be, she must revolutionize her very life and become the embodiment of Russian feelings and Russian aspirations. Mrs. Frank Leslie did not allow the business of her husband's publishing house to die or even to dwindle, for stepping to the front with woman-born force, the machine was kept at full power and carried on with increasing success.

From the dauntless Mollie Pitcher, rushing defiantly to the death-dealing gun, silenced but a moment by her husband's death, to Florence Nightingale, "The Angel of the Crimea," who with her loving administration, rendered care to the many wounded—soothing, quieting, home-filling, heart-satisfying, soul-helping—there is a wide area but one that is ever nobly filled by the useful, telling activities of woman. Every day new interests are born, new avenues opened to woman. One quotes, "A mining company, financed and managed by woman, was put into operation in Oklahoma; Miss Charlotte Vincent is the assistant bacteriologist of the health department at Baltimore; Miss A. H. Barney of Minneapolis, was licensed as the first woman operator of a moving picture machine in Minnesota."

Other Fields

Registration taken now covers 130 separate occupations in nine different classes in which woman has entered—agricultural, clerical, domestic, industrial, professional public service, social service, Red Cross, allied relief, and a host of others, including Red Star, W. C. T. U., P. T. A., library work. The agriculture labor alone ranges through six divisions, from gardening to stock-raising; twenty-seven different activities mark the professional class from architecture to surgery; the clerical division covers the range from stenography to office manager; the industrial unit embraces anything from cook to munition factory work; the public service lists her assistance from mail-carriers or wireless operator through thirteen other roles, while the secret service claims her aid in fifteen different lines of work, and the Red Cross calls for five.

Malta

The island of Malta was once merely a rock in the Mediterranean, immense in size. Indefatigably did the Maltese labor to convert it into a land of fertility. Ships were sent away for loads of earth. Year after year this continued. This industrious, ingenious race continued at this work down through the ages, and now that barren rock yields to prosperity, sharing her wealth with the world.

"MARY FAITH" by Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Faith and Kimberley Farrell have been engaged for some time. Mary Faith, beautiful young orphan, gives up her position as secretary to Mark Nesbit when Kim sets their wedding date. His attitude changes brusquely when his mother objects. The latter treats Mary Faith coldly. Heartbroken, Mary Faith returns to her office and breaks the news to her co-workers. Mark, taken ill, has Mary Faith driven to his country home, daily, for two weeks. He tells her of his love for her. She halts him saying she will never love anyone as she did Kim. While in a jewelry store with Mark, selecting a Christmas ring for his sister, Mary Faith meets Kim with a girl. Next morning Kim calls at Mary Faith's boarding house. He assures her of his love and proposes immediate marriage. Mary Faith melts in his arms.

CHAPTER XIV

"I'll telephone Dr. Pomeroy tonight and ask him if he'll meet us in the chapel at eleven o'clock," his voice ran on. "And I'll ask the Maldons to come down. We're supposed to have a couple of witnesses, aren't we?"

Dr. Pomeroy was the rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, where she and Kim had always planned to be married. But who were the Maldons? She never had heard Kim mention them.

"Who are the Maldons, Kim?" she asked.
 He thought for a minute or two.
 "Why, I guess you haven't met them," he said at last. "I haven't known them so very long, myself, but they're pals of mine. Jack works down at our place. He and Claire have been married only two or three months. You'll like Claire, Mary Faith. She's a grand person."

Mary Faith stirred in his arms.
 "I'd like to ask Jean Bartlett to the wedding. She's my best friend"—she was beginning when he stopped her.

"No. We're not going to have any of your friend Nesbit's office help around," he said firmly. "You're through with all that crowd, so forget them. I'm not going to tell even my mother about the wedding until it's all over. . . . Now, let me tell you where I thought we'd spend our two weeks."

She settled back to listen.
 "You remember that aunt of mine who lives down in Garrettsville, Mary Faith?"

"Aunt Ella Goad, you mean?" Mary Faith remembered Aunt Ellen Goad very well. Having once seen Aunt Ella, you could never forget her.

She was a plump and pleasant person with a passion for moving pictures, library books, armchairs, and coffee and cake between meals. Mary Faith had always liked her, and she said so now.

"Well, she's come up to town to stay with my mother over the holidays," said Kim, "and I'm going to ask her to lend us her house down in Garrettsville for the next two weeks."

"Kim! Do you think she'll let us have it?" Mary Faith's eyes shone in the darkness. "Won't it be lovely if she does!—I can cook all the things you like to eat, and get your bath ready in the mornings and put the collar buttons in your shirt!—And you can build the fires and shovel the snow off the walks so that I can get out of the yard when I want to go to market—"

"I'll drive you there in the car so that you won't get your cute feet all cold and wet," Kim said. "I'm going to take doggone good care of my wife."

"All right, you take care of me then."

"I'm going to," Kim said, and he said it gravely as if he were making himself a solemn promise.

"I'm leaving," said Mary Faith.

Mr. McClintock was playing checkers with Allie Brock when Mary Faith went back into the house an hour later. He sat facing the hall door and he saw her as she started up the stairs.

She turned her head and smiled at him. And he looked at her, blinking a little, as if he were looking at a sunrise.

Before she went to bed that night Mary Faith washed her hair and "did" her nails. Then she packed two suitcases with things for her honeymoon and laid out her clothes for the next day. A hunter's green suit trimmed with gray fox, a little green hat, pale gray stockings and slippers and handbag; a gray chiffon blouse.

It was one o'clock in the morning when she went to bed and she was awake again at half past six. It was still dark but the dawn wind blew in through the open windows and there was a line of silver in the sky above the rooftops on the other side of River Street.

"My wedding day," she thought, taking a long deep breath of it before she put down her windows. "This is the last time I'll ever get up in this room."

But there was no regret, no sadness, in the thought. She looked forward to her life with Kim with nothing but happiness in her heart.

The old house was like a tomb, as it always was on winter mornings, and she shivered as she ran down to the bathroom on the second floor. You had to get up at the crack of dawn if you wanted to take a morning bath at Mrs. Puckett's, for the "paying guests" all got up around seven and fairly fought for the bathroom.

When Mary Faith, fresh as a flower, came out into the hall a half hour later, Mrs. Puckett, with her bath towel and a cake of pink soap in her hand, was waiting just outside the door.

"I hope you didn't use all the hot water, Mary Faith," she said. "What you up so early for?"

"I'm going down to the office to get all my things—and I want to get away from it before everybody arrives," Mary Faith answered.

"Mrs. Puckett, I'm going to marry Kim Farrell this morning."

Mrs. Puckett stared at her from under her wrinkled eyelids for a long moment. Then she shook her head.

"I haven't a word to say, Mary Faith," she announced. "I haven't a word to say!"

But when Mary Faith was half-way up the stairs she said something else.

"I hope you'll be happy," was what she said. "I hope you'll be happy. I pray for it, Mary Faith. . . . I certainly do."

The clock in Mark Nesbit's empty office was striking eight when Mary Faith walked into her own little room that morning.

She had brought her hat box—a round leather affair—with her and into it she packed the contents of her desk drawers. An oil-silk bag in which she kept her soap and nail-brush and tooth brush. Two clean face towels that belonged to Mrs. Puckett. A library book. A bank book and a check book. A dime savings bank. A pair of rubbers and a folding umbrella. A pasteboard box filled with old letters and receipts. A box of writing paper and correspondence cards.

She had them all in the hatbox and was closing it when she heard the door open behind her. She swung around, Mark Nesbit was standing in the doorway.

He looked first at the open drawers of the desk and then at the hatbox.

"What do you think you're doing, Mary Faith?" His eyes seemed to take her in, point by point. The green hat, the expensive fur-trimmed suit, the gray slippers with their cut-steel buckles.

"I'm—leaving," said Mary Faith.

sent forth ships of determined faith and they have returned laden with that which makes glad the land. Rocks have been covered with mother-love, with encouragement, with progress. Then why should woman not take her place in the world of business and labor, when she so often has been the suggestive and active force of converting the world into fertile fields and blossoming tracts? She is the embodiment of hope, of endurance, of determination, of patience, of non-aggressiveness, of love. She sings through the toil of the day and through the loneliness of the night, yet she sings. When baby ears, too young in life to recognize the various sounds around them, yet never did they miss the lullabies, the hush-abies, the rock-a-bies of all ages as sung to them by mothers, loving, enduring, and tuned by them into such a grand, glorious outburst of melody that the songsters of the air and the sweet-voiced Jenny Linds of earth; and other artists singing, swinging through life to the music of palette and brush; the compelling chisel, proclaiming them to be of the world's famous sculptors, all, all stand in rhythmic silence to pay homage to the patient, hopeful, advancing mothers of the land—mothers in lowly homes pitifully touched by the ever-present mark of privation and want; mothers in homes richly embedded in wealth, yet all silently, prayerfully adding of their strength and unlimited resources to the glorious uplifting and advancement of home and nation. The grandest of all of God's wonderful creations must be the mothers and the women that stand by. They are exceptionally qualified to represent the world in business and labor. It is no longer a question as to the propriety of her stepping over the sill of her home to go out into the broad stretches of activity, for she is now fully and appreciatively recognized as a most important business factor in life. There are so many islands of Malta in the world, but the indomitable will of woman will, sooner or later, cause them to serve the world in productive-ness and beauty. The ice dare not jam where woman works.

CHAPTER XV

He crossed the room and stood beside her, looking down at her and shaking his head.

"I hope you're not leaving because of—last night," he said. "There's no reason why you should leave, Mary Faith. We're still good friends, aren't we? We can go on working together, can't we?"

Mary Faith stood helplessly wondering how to answer him.

"How on earth can I tell him I'm going to be married?" she asked herself.

"I can't," she decided. "Not when he likes me the way he does."

She stooped and picked up the hatbox.

"I've made up my mind to leave," she said awkwardly, and because she had begun to feel as if she were going to cry, her voice was cold. She turned toward the door.

"Well, I'm sorry, Mary Faith. And, look here, if you ever want to come back we're always waiting for you. You'll remember that, won't you?"

She nodded.

"And there's something else—" He put his hand on the knob of the door. "I want you to know that you can always count on me if you need me for anything. You know how I feel about you, Mary Faith, and I'm not going to change."

He held the door open for her and stood watching her as she went across the big empty office and vanished down the stairs.

Mary Faith and Kim were married at high noon in the chapel of the Church of the Heavenly Rest.

December sunlight came in through the high, stained-glass windows and laid its bright finger on the pages of Dr. Pomeroy's prayer book as he began to read the marriage service:

"Dear beloved, we are gathered here together in the sight of God to join together this man and this woman."

Mary Faith had tight hold of Kim's hand and her eyes were on his face.

"Dear beloved, I wonder if you know how happy I am to be standing here beside you at last!" she said to him in her heart while the minister went on with the beautiful and simple words that were binding them together.

Kim, being Kim, had forgotten to buy the wedding ring, and Claire Maldon had let him take hers for the ceremony. Mary Faith looked down at it as Kim slipped it over her finger and found herself wondering what he had done with her engagement ring.

"I'll never ask him about it," she made up her mind. In all probability he had taken it back to the jewelry store where he had bought it. He was always in need of money.

Well, she would see to it that he saved part of his money from now on, she told herself. She was a good manager. Hadn't she saved eighteen hundred dollars herself during the last four years? She thought comfortably of them tucked away in her savings account downtown.

"I can buy lots of little things for the house," in her mind she went through the dingy Wilton Street flat, putting up new white curtains in the sitting room, setting the dining-room table with a set of Indian Tree china, tacking down shiny new blue-and-white linoleum on the kitchen floor. Her fingers fairly itched to get at that flat and make it a brighter place for Kim.

He was turning to her now and Dr. Pomeroy was beaming at them both as he closed his prayer book.

Claire and Jack Maldon came up to them from the shadows where they had been standing.

Claire's bright blue eyes were on Kim's face and she was smiling broadly at him. She laid one of her white-gloved hands on his shoulder.

"Well, Sandy," she asked him, "how do you feel now that it's all over?"

Kim laughed. "I feel just like a married man," he said. "That service certainly does tie you up for life, doesn't it?—Till Death do us part! That's quite a line, isn't it?"

Claire turned her eyes to Mary Faith. "Now that you're safely married, could I please have my wedding ring?" she asked. "They say it's bad luck to take off your wedding ring, and this is the first time I've had mine off since Jack put it on last October. I keep it on even when I wash dishes."

She talked constantly. She talked all the way into the registry where Mary Faith and Kim wrote their names in a book filled with the names of other brides and grooms and all the way out of the shadowy old church into the sunlight.

"Sandy," she said to Kim as they stood in the street beside Kim's shabby little roadster. "We brought you and Mary Faith a wedding present and put it in the back of your car. It's a package of books—all the new novels that looked good to us. We knew they'd be life-savers for you down in that dead little town where you're going."

She had a light, pretty voice that was like a very simple piece of music.

"You don't believe what I'm telling you," it rippled on, "but in a week or so you two will be so bored with each other that you'll yawn every three minutes by the clock. You'll wish you'd never seen each other. . . . Jack and I scrapped all the time we were on our honeymoon, didn't we, Jack?"

Jack Maldon, a tall, dark, quiet-mannered young man, grinned and said nothing.

"Well, we did whether he admits it or not," said Claire. "We fought like two strange bull-dogs. . . . You see, we thought we wanted to be all by ourselves, just the way you do. So we went 'way up into the North Woods, miles from everywhere. And four days after we got there it began to rain. It just poured! And we didn't have a thing to read or even a deck of cards! It was ghastly! Next time I get married I'm going to Atlantic City or Palm Beach or some other crowded spot for my honeymoon, and no fooling!"

She clung to her husband's arm and waved her hand at them as they drove off.

"When you get lonesome come back to town and call up the Maldons!" Her voice floated after them through the clear bright air. "Don't forget, Sandy!"

The gray-blue shadows of late afternoon lay across the snow when Mary Faith and Kim drove into the main street of Garrettsville—"the main drag," as Kim called it.

It was a long narrow street lined with little shops—a candy store called the Sugar Bowl, a White Front Meat Market, a Five-and-Ten filled with tinsel and toys, a jewelry store that reminded Mary Faith that she had no wedding ring.

Kim parked the car at the little telegraph office and they sent off two day letters—one to his mother and one to Mrs. Puckett.

"Now, then, we've done our duty," Kim said when they came out into the snow and sunshine once more; "and we can forget the rest of the world for two solid weeks, Mrs. Farrell."

The world that Mary Faith had always known already seemed very far away. It was only last night that she had sat talking to Mrs. Puckett in the house on River Street? Only this morning that she had said goodbye to Mark Nesbit in her old office in the Nesbit Building? It seemed ages ago. . . .

Aunt Ella Goad's brown shingle house stood at the top of a little hill half a mile beyond Garrettsville.

Snow lay deep on its porches and along the tops of its diamond-paned windows. A silver fringe of icicles hung from its low-pitched roof and on either side of it stood a tall fir tree.

"It isn't a real house at all. It's a picture on an old-fashioned Christmas card, Kim, and I know it!" Mary Faith declared as they drove up the hill and into the drifts of the backyard.

"It's old-fashioned, all right. There isn't even a garage," Kim said dryly. He always seemed embarrassed when Mary Faith made extravagant statements or quoted poetry to him. "The car will probably freeze, standing in that woodshed all night."

He set the suitcases and the Maldons' books on the back porch and unlocked the door.

The kitchen was filled with a faint spicy smell as if gingerbread had been baked in it, and the low red sun shining in through the west windows made it seem very bright and cozy. There were rag rugs on the floor and a big cushioned rocker stood near the stove.

Mary Faith stood in the very middle of it, enchanted.

"Did you ever see such a lovely kitchen in all your life?" She turned wide starry eyes to Kim. "And look at the wall paper in the dining room! All this Chinese pagoda and boats! Why, this house is just a house of a dream, isn't it?"

"Is it?" Kim asked. He had no eyes for the little house. He had come up beside her and his arms were around her, holding her so close that she seemed to feel the quick heavy drumming of his heart in her own heart. She sighed, lifting her face to him.

"You're happy here with me aren't you, Mary Faith?"

"Kim," she said with a throbbing note in her voice, "Kim, I'm never happy unless I am with you."

. . . .

For two weeks both of them were gloriously happy with a happiness that Mary Faith had never dreamed of. The days were gone before they knew it, and yet all of them were pretty much alike.

Every morning Mary Faith went downstairs as soon as it was light and made the coffee. She made it as she had learned to make it at the Business Woman's Club cooking classes, with hot foamy milk, and carried it upstairs on a tray. She and Kim would sit up in bed in their bathrobes and drink it, telling each other with great contentment that this was the life!

NOTICE

The Public Service Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. In re application of J. G. Whinnery, Jr., trading and doing business as Whinnery's Express.

File No. A-25556-1933. Folder No. 1. Notice is hereby given that application has been made to The Public Service Commission of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, under the provisions of the Public Service Company Law, by J. G. Whinnery, Jr., trading and doing business as Whinnery's Express, for a certificate of Public Convenience evidencing the Commission's requisite approval of the registration of the rights, powers and privileges possessed prior to January 1, 1914, and exercised continuously since that date, and for approval of the beginning of the exercise of the right and privilege of operating motor vehicles as a common carrier for the transportation of freight, merchandise and other personal property between points and places within the County of Philadelphia and such parts of the Counties of Delaware, Chester, Montgomery and Bucks as lie within a line passing through and including Marcus Hook, West Chester, Norristown and Bristol, in so far as the same may be necessary to cover any expansion of the business as conducted prior to January 1, 1914.

A public hearing upon this application will be held in Hearing Room, No. 1, Ground Floor, East Wing, North Office Building, Harrisburg, on Thursday, the 27th day of April, 1933, at 9:30 A. M. o'clock, when and where all persons in interest may appear and be heard, if they so desire.

MELLOWED A HUNDRED MILLION YEARS

While Nature created frightfulness in PENNSYLVANIA

UP from the buried sands of the Devonian Age, formed millions of years before even these frightful monsters lived, comes the Bradford-Alleghany crude oil of the Pennsylvania District—the crude which Sinclair refines into Sinclair Pennsylvania Motor Oil. Bradford-Alleghany crude is Pennsylvania's costliest crude. The extra price which Sinclair must pay for every barrel of Bradford-Alleghany crude results from its remarkable lubricating quality—a quality which was established by the perfect oil-forming conditions in the Devonian Age, enhanced by a hundred million years of filtering and mellowing. Ask to have your oil changed to Sinclair Pennsylvania—the year-round Pennsylvania grade motor oil, de-waxed and freed from petroleum jelly at as low as 60° F. below zero.

Morrisville May Close Schools for Term End of May

the school term by recalling of the old contracts.

The board is waiting anxiously for the outcome in the Legislature of consideration of a number of bills pertaining to school districts.

The extent of the salary cuts for teachers at Morrisville has not been decided by the local school board. Under a new law, it is permissible to make the reduction 10 per cent below the minimum of $1,000 for grade teachers and $1,200 for high school teachers.

Where a school board finds that it is not able to operate with this reduction, permission can be sought for still further reduction from the State superintendent of public instruction.

While the school board has not done anything about the tax rate for next year, it is predicted by informed persons that there will be no reduction in school taxes.

Predictions have been heard that the school term for next year may be cut even to seven or eight months in order to live within the sum of money available from taxes. The present financial condition of the school system makes it appear that a reduction in the tax rate is unlikely.

HERRIOT SAILS FOR AMERICA

Havre, France, Apr. 17.—Under heavy police guard, to protect him from possible assault, former Premier Edouard Herriot boarded the liner Ile de France today bound for Washington to confer on world problems with President Roosevelt. Divided political opinion over his mission to the United States and numerous editorial attacks were responsible for the precaution to protect the statesman, authorities declared.

A potted hyacinth was presented to each Sunday School scholar. Last evening under direction of Miss Clara L. Hillick a sacred cantata "The Risen Redeemer" was given by a choir of 14 women.

At Grace P. E. Church, Hulmeville, Saturday afternoon, the pastor, the Rev. James C. Gilbert, conducted a baptismal service. Those baptized were: Betty Jane Foster, of Bristol, godparents being Miss Mary Terneson and Herman Foster, Bristol; and Helen Grace Phillips, with Mrs. Norman Davis and Miss Gertrude Adams as sponsors. Choral communion occurred at Grace Church at 11 a. m., yesterday, and all Easter services were largely attended.

COMMUNICATION

Editor, Courier.

Sir:—Several months have elapsed since the T. B. & P. Trolley Co. suspended trolley service and the borough council has taken no action to have said trolley company either remove or fill in said trolley tracks which are very dangerous to motorists on wet days or nights. Some speedy action should be taken to prevent accidents.

Essay Wins First Honors For Miss Winifred Stauffer

situation. The girl who has had home economics is taught not only the methods of cookery but the wise selection of linens and silverware. She is taught to realize that a low price does not always indicate a bargain. Likewise she understands that by paying a high price she is not insured good quality.

The best methods of cleaning a home are stated in the home economics text books and the student finds that even in cleaning her room, if she uses a certain method, time and energy is saved. While speaking of saving energy, many a housewife works day after day in a kitchen which is rectangular, or perhaps a sink is too low. The student knows that it is wise, in the interest of unnecessary footsteps, to prefer a square kitchen and she well knows that she should have her sink just the right height.

Another important advantage offered by the home economics course is thorough training in the rules of etiquette. By consistent training and practice in the class-room the student can become a well groomed and cultured girl. She learns to be a gracious and efficient hostess and this plays a most important part in home-making.

A girl naturally desires to be well dressed but she often does not know how to choose proper clothes. The student of Home Economics learns how to always dress appropriately. If she plans to make a dress she selects material which she knows to be of a good quality. She is able to fit her dress so that it appears to be ready-made. Another advantage in having a knowledge of dress-making is in the making over of last spring's dress into this spring's clever style. This proves helpful on the financial side and is especially to be favored in these times.

Although the student, through her knowledge of food values, knows the correct way to health, by correct diet, she is always prepared in case of illness in the family to prescribe and serve attractively the best foods which will supply the needs for the patient's particular illness. The students, by consistent training, is well prepared for any emergencies. She is taught to work with the changes instead of against them.

Through all the different phases in home economics training, the general result is a sound and efficient training in home-making. The art of cookery, nutrition, clothing and health are handed together to serve the home economics student in preparing her for the vocation of home-making in present-day life.

It was indicated in the report that repairs are needed to the tanks at the plant and that trap rock and not slag should have been used on the spray beds. It was declared also that the re-setting tanks should have better pumping facilities and the sludge beds are too low, they being in wet soil which prevents the proper drainage.

Commenting on the system, the representative of the firm said: "The entire system is very poorly constructed." Sewer lines should be straight between manholes, but the committee has found many variations.

Reports show that there are 289 bends, 44 visible leaks, pipes low in 128 places, sewer stands in lines in 46 places, grade flattens out in 33 places and there are at least 19 open joints and cracked pipes.

Of the seven flush tanks in the line system, only one has been in operation since the period of construction. The syphons, it is alleged, do not operate and the tanks leak because of poor construction. It is alleged also that the tanks were constructed smaller than as provided for in the specifications.

Leaky manholes, it was stated, are caused by inferior materials, porous cinder bricks having been used instead of the solid type specified.

It is alleged that the plans approved by the State Sanitary Board were changed when the construction was begun and the limit of infiltration as set by the board at 5,000 gallons per mile of pipe per day has at times been over 112,000 gallons.

Recommendations made by the engineering firm stated that the odor could be reduced at the pumping station and the plant by double chlorination of the sewage. It was suggested that the entire system could be rebuilt, but this was not considered absolutely necessary. It was stated that 7926 feet of sewer line must be constructed. Twenty-eight of the manholes must be re-built and others must be repaired. Six of the seven flush tanks must be repaired.

The firm recommended that a meter and a force main be installed at the pumping station and that the filter beds be cleaned and the resetting basins altered. Sludge drying beds, it was said, should be reconstructed and a new sludge pump installed. Water, it was recommended, should be piped to the plant for flushing purposes and a laboratory provided for testing.

Repairs to the line are estimated to cost approximately $42,000.

After hearing the reports and the recommendations Council took action that the engineering firm of Remington & Vossbury, who superintended the construction of the sewer, be sued for damages. Solicitor Luckenbill was authorized to proceed to take legal action immediately.
